The UMW has added fourteen new books to the library. All these books are available for self checkout to members of the congregation. The new books are located on the south shelves of the library. This month's recommendation is Tomatoland by Barry Estabrook. If you purchase tomatoes during the winter, they are most likely a product of Central Florida, picked by migrant workers, shipped green and hard as a baseball! In addition to learning about the history of tomato plants originationing in South America you will come to understand why tomatoes in the store just don't taste like the ones grown in local gardens.

The Lincoln-Lancaster County Health Department (LLCHD) today announced that the COVID-19 Risk Dial will remain in red position for a third consecutive week, indicating that the risk of the virus spreading in the community is severe. On the color-coded dial, red represents the highest risk of COVID-19 spread, and green represents the lowest risk. The Lincoln-Lancaster County Health Department strongly recommends that people continue to wear masks indoors around others from outside their household.
